Ward aids blind students

By JOSEPH WALKER
Universe Staff Writer

Blind students are finding it a little easier to get around in the David McKay Building and the Jesse H. Hunt Building Annex thanks to a service project by the BYU 6th ward.

Project coordinator Micheala Iacovelli said members of the ward have been working since January to install plastic plates with braille on signs to be installed near all classrooms and office doors in the two buildings.

Ward members also prepared signs for elevator entries and corridors, restrooms, maps and a directory for the third floor of the Annex, Iacovelli said.

Custodians from the BYU Physical Plant placed the room plates 60 inches from the floor on the doorknob side of each classroom, office, elevator and restroom. Maps were installed to the right of the elevators on all floors. The maps will indicate where the student is at that moment relative to the other rooms and offices on the floor.

"A mobile specialist is going to instruct the blind students on campus where the plates are and how to use them," Miss Iacovelli said.

The project, which began when Bishop Richard Hartley felt a need to involve the members of his ward in a useful service project, is considered a pilot program. "If it works out well, and we think it will, we will consider similar installations across campus," said Albert Haines, project coordinator for the BYU Physical Plant.

Miss Iacovelli said the project will serve three purposes; to help blind students on campus, to make the rest of the studentbody more aware of the problems encountered by blind students and to unite ward members in service to others.

"Everybody had a good time working on the project," Miss Iacovelli said. "People were so anxious to help. Now that we're finished, we feel very proud. We only hope that blind students benefit from using the plates as much as we did from making them."

Strike hurts production

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of workers were given short shifts today and the prospect of product shortages and other disruptions as a trucking industry lockout of 50,000 Teamsters took hold.

The lockout, ordered by industry executives after the union launched a weekend strike over a contract dispute, was expected to halt a sizable portion of interstate shipments of national freight — from fresh foods to heavy parts — within days.

The auto industry was the first to feel the impact of the industry shutdown. The nation's two largest carmakers, General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., said an estimated 100,000 assembly line workers were being sent home early Monday because of parts shortages, and further production cutbacks were imminent.

A spokesman for Trucking Management Inc., which had ordered the lockout Sunday, said its more than 500 member firms account for 85 percent of the unionized interstate freight business.

The spokesman, Norman Walker, said "virtually all" of TMI's members were complying with the lockout — a tactic used in labor disputes in which employers refuse to let their employees work.

One industry analyst, who asked not to be named, predicted a nationwide shutdown could trigger a "very serious crisis" in the economy within two weeks.

Some food stores could run out of fresh foods, particularly meat, within a week, said Robert Dobkin, a spokesman for the retail food industry. "Right now, we'll have to assess this a day at a time," Dobkin said.

The Carter administration has said it would seek a court order under the Taft-Hartley Act to end either a nationwide strike or lockout if the labor dispute poses a national emergency.

There has never been an industry shutdown of this scope for any length of time.

As a result, administration officials said Monday it would take several days for them to determine the impact.

The only previous industry shutdown came in 1976, when the Teamsters union struck for three days before settling on its last national contract, which expired this past Saturday at midnight.

Y's Lost and Found receives unique items

By PAUL BOWLER

Are you one of 48 students who lost an umbrella on March 19?

The 48 umbrellas lost that day was a record, said Waneen Nield, supervisor for BYU's Lost and Found. Other seasonal items which are lost quite frequently are gloves and coats, which students wear to school in the mornings and then leave on campus when the weather warms up.

The Lost and Found has received everything from hubcaps and wheelchairs to tricycles and toys. "I don't think you could name anything we haven't had turned in to the Lost and Found," Mrs. Nield said.

Because of the many church meetings in the Wilkinson Center on Sunday, Mondays probably have the greatest volume of any day. Scriptures, baby clothes and baby bottles are items frequently turned in on Mondays.

Mrs. Nield said two of the most unique items ever received at Lost and Found have been a package of cigarettes and a gun. The cigarettes were kept for awhile and then finally thrown away. "When the gun was turned in we called Security," Mrs. Nield said.

"The other day we returned an envelope with $70 in it, which was a guy's rent money," she said. He didn't check with Lost and Found because he lost it outside and thought there was no way it would be turned in. The envelope,

Reactor cools; officials hopeful

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Engineers achieved a "dramatic decrease" Monday in a gas bubble that has held a stranglehold on efforts to cool down the disabled Three Mile Island nuclear reactor.

A team of nuclear experts was checking instruments, examining measurements in an effort to determine whether the decrease was a permanent development.

"We believe it would be prudent to sit and wait a little while to make sure it's not coming back," said Richard Vollmer, assistant director for site analysis at the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Plant and federal officials said the hydrogen bubble had shrunk to a much safer size, with less threat of displacing the reactor's cooling water, and the reactor's temperature had dropped significantly.

"I am certain it is cause for optimism," said Harold Denton, Nuclear Regulatory Commission operations chief. He said the bubble was showing "a dramatic decrease in size."

Local civil defense officials, hopeful that the changes meant that the five-day crisis here had passed, nevertheless maintained efforts to prepare for a precautionary evacuation of 25,000 residents still within a five-mile radius of the plant.

But the signals were clear: The situation had improved substantially.

On Monday, technicians continued efforts to eliminate the bubble completely, chiefly by the method they have been using all along: letting the gas dissolve in the constantly circulating cooling water and then allowing it to escape from the water outside the reactor.

Technicians also studied options on exactly how to achieve the "cold shutdown" which would go a long way to ending the crisis.

George Troffer, an official with Metropolitan Edison, which operates the facility, said radioactive releases had been halted at the site.

And NRC's Denton said that radiation beaming from the plant was at low levels in a confined area.

The bubble, which had threatened an explosion that could have ripped the lid off the reactor dome and spewed radiation, began shrinking dramatically Sunday and continued throughout the day and night, Troffer said.

The latest developments gave officials more time to cool down the reactor. The critical time for a possible explosion from a chemical reaction within the reactor "has moved considerably out" from the five days Denton had predicted on Sunday, he said.

It was the most encouraging statement to date from the NRC since Wednesday's accident, which had led the governor to urge pre-school children and pregnant women to stay further than five miles from the plant and prompted an estimated 50,000 persons to voluntarily leave the Harrisburg area.

Meanwhile, all schools within 10 miles of the plant were closed Monday, and some state government offices reported up to one-third of their employees stayed home. Factories and businesses were stung by absenteeism and operated with skeleton staffs.

Customers queued up in banks, trying to withdraw money before an evacuation was announced, state banking officials said.

But Denton said it was his opinion that with conditions improving at Three Mile Island, an evacuation was not warranted. John McGreevy, administrator of Polyclinic Medical Center, Harrisburg's largest hospital, said, "I have been told by very reliable sources there are no evacuation plans in the foreseeable future."

But Denton said it was his opinion that with conditions improving at Three Mile Island, an evacuation was not warranted. John McGreevy, administrator of Polyclinic Medical Center, Harrisburg's largest hospital, said, "I have been told by very reliable sources there are no evacuation plans in the foreseeable future."

Meanwhile, the NRC moved to avoid future cooling system breakdowns elsewhere, ordering officials at seven other nuclear plants to explain what they are doing to prevent similar failures. All seven were designed by Babcock and Wilcox Co., the firm which drew up plans for Three Mile Island.

Plant engineers at Three Mile Island shrunk the gas bubble by allowing the hydrogen in the reactor's cooling water to escape into another building, just as carbon dioxide bubbles out of a soda bottle when the cap is removed and pressure is released.

At the same time, the oxygen trickle into the hydrogen bubble, which for a time had threatened to create a chemical reaction and a subsequent explosion, was not increasing as rapidly, Denton said.

Firemen confirm charges

By JOHN JACKSON
Universe Staff Writer

Allegations that pressure was applied to keep city employees out of last week's Orem City Council meeting were confirmed Monday by members of the fire department.

Meanwhile, Orem police officers voted themselves to silence.

Friday The Daily Universe disclosed that a police officer was reprimanded because his wife spoke out at the council meeting.

Chief of Police Ted Peacock and Lt. Gerald Nielsen said the Universe story was "full of errors," but refused to point them out or to comment on the issue other than to call the report "a cock and bull story."

The only known error in the story was a report that "several members of the police and fire departments were present at Tuesday's council meeting." In reality only firemen attended the meeting. The wife of policeman Clayton Allred was also in attendance.

Fireman Dave Fairhurst, however, added to existing allegations when he said Chief Peacock had called his home to discourage him from attending last week's city council meeting.

Fairhurst said he was on his way to the meeting when the call came and was taken by his wife. Mrs. Fairhurst said Chief Peacock told her that her husband's presence at the meeting would jeopardize salary negotiations with the city.

"This is completely out of line as far as his (Peacock's) duties and functions are concerned," Fairhurst said. "I'm not a policeman, I'm a fireman."

Fireman Lynn Rowley said after the meeting firemen were called in by their superiors. "We were told directly, to say the least, the chief and city manager were extremely aggravated at our presence."

Fireman Jerry Cross said the word had come down to him before the meeting that the firemen were not to attend.

Meanwhile the Orem Police Officers Association voted not to discuss the alleged pressures with the press. Morris said, "Things that have transpired in the last week and a half" would not be detailed because it might jeopardize proposals concerning salary and benefits.

Morris said the proposals are part of a study turned in to the city two weeks ago.

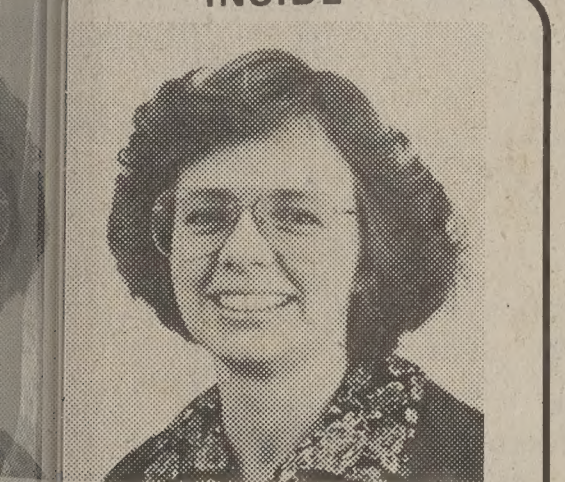

When asked if he was studying the proposals, City Manager Albert Haines said, "I don't know if I have or not, I haven't read it." He said he had only scanned the study.

"I will continue to solicit input from employees," he said, "but I will not respond every time to a proposal submitted by anybody."

mission may have been guilty of some 20 "technical violations" of the Utah State Sunshine Law since the first of the year.

Guy Burningham, deputy county attorney, met with the commission in its chambers to release the findings of an investigation his office conducted into alleged commission violations of the Sunshine Law. The allegations, containing some 80 different items, were brought by Commissioner H. Jerry Bradshaw last February. Bradshaw claimed the items did not appear on the commission's agenda 24 hours before their meetings.

Burningham said there would be no major changes because of his department's findings. "The actions taken by the commission which might have been in 'technical violation' did not involve any significant matters," Burningham said. "There was absolutely no indication of any intentional wrongdoing or any attempt to do anything secretly by the county commission."

There are no provisions for violations of the Sunshine Act, Burningham said, except that "any final action taken in violation of the act is voidable by a court." The deputy attorney suggested which had the student's name and the name of the renter on it, was turned in to Lost and Found.

"We sent him a closed letter informing him we had something for him," Mrs. Nield said. He came in, not knowing what Lost and Found had for him, and was surprised to have his money returned.

Approximately 3,000-5,000 items are turned in per month, including such expensive items as coats, watches, class rings and an occasional diamond ring, Mrs. Nield said. "Of all items received at Lost and Found, we are able to return 60-65 percent of them," she said.

Everything turned in, no matter how insignificant it may seem to be, is kept for a period of two months. "We do everything and anything we can to get in contact with people," Mrs. Nield said.

"We have eight students working part-time for Lost and Found." Four of those students work at returning items, she said.

With the end of the semester approaching, Lost and Found has some helpful suggestions for students:

1. Put your name (legible) and a current address on all your possessions, particularly books.
2. For those who have a locker on campus, be sure to clear it of personal belongings.
3. Don't leave wallets and purses unattended.

Anti-nuclear groups protest

By The Associated Press

Anti-nuclear groups staged demonstrations Monday in Japan and West Germany while a Soviet commentator said the U.S. nuclear accident that prompted the protests was a consequence of American capitalistic "energy monopolies" hunting for profits at all costs.

In the southern West German state of Baden-Wuerttemberg, officials disclosed they have issued special iodine pills to people living within a mile and a half of nuclear plants.

State Interior Minister Guntram Palm said the pills would reduce the amount of radioactive iodine ingested in the crucial minutes between a possible accident and an evacuation order.

Amin checks bombing damage

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin made a surprise appearance in Jinja after a raid Monday by Tanzanian jets on Uganda's second largest city, residents reported.

Startled townspeople at Jinja, 50 miles east of the Ugandan capital of Kampala, said shortly after the morning raid by two MiG-21 jet fighters Amin appeared and ordered panicking people to return to work.

According to one witness, Amin said, "We have shot down the enemy." A second said Amin vowed he would "teach the attackers a big lesson." He also reportedly inspected damage from the raid.

Egyptians cool to Begin

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin got his first taste of normal relations with Egypt Monday and said he was "deeply moved," but the Egyptian reaction to his visit here appeared strained and cool.

Several government officials and Egyptian reporters accompanying the prime minister grumbled that the Israeli leader should have waited until the Arab anger over the peace treaty had abated. They expressed concern about the economic and political sanctions imposed on Egypt over the weekend and the departure of Arab ambassadors from Cairo.

Official backs nuclear power

SEATTLE (AP) — The head of the Bonneville Power Administration says neither the movie "China Syndrome" nor the anti-nuclear literature he received on his way out of the theater was enough to change his mind about nuclear power.

Sterling Munro used adjectives like "exciting" and "dramatic" to describe the film's fictional account of a near meltdown at a nuclear plant.

The biggest problem as he saw it was the movie's ending. With lights flashing, buzzers sounding, the earth trembling and the end of the world in sight, the problem miraculously sorts itself out.

"I never did understand how they got out of it," Munro said.

Back in the real world, the drama at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Pennsylvania during the past week has done little to shake Munro's confidence in nuclear power either.

"It's made it (nuclear power) more of an issue," he said in an interview Monday. Munro was in town to preach his litany of energy conservation before the Electric League of the Northwest.

"Nothing should be taken for granted. The burden of proof is on the nuclear industry and the burden of proof involving safety aspects is on the U.S. government," he said.

If after the nation goes through this catharsis it is decided the risks involved in nuclear energy aren't worth it, Munro said: "I would regret it."

"I don't know anything that doesn't require choices. But if nuclear plants are found to be safe and efficient, they are the cheapest alternative," he said.

Munro said he is unable to assess the safety of the nine nuclear plants either under construction or in the licensing process in the Northwest. He says that's the job of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the states.

Federal and state agencies are reviewing applications for plants at Pebble Springs in Eastern Oregon and in the Skagit Valley north of Seattle.

"I don't see how this (the Three Mile Island incident) is going to encourage them to approve the plants when they already had doubts," he said.

But Munro insists those plants are needed. He says he would rather have a nuclear plant next to his cherry orchard in Wenatchee than a coal plant.

Only one item, a decision to appoint four mayors and four commissioners to the Timpanogos Special Services District, was thought important enough by Bradshaw to be reconsidered. It was placed on the commission's agenda for Wednesday.

Bradshaw was satisfied with the results of the investigation. "Frankly I got everything I asked for," Bradshaw said. "I don't want to rehash all those things because they're on the agenda. I don't want to make martyrs of the other commissioners."

Some of the violations include items Bradshaw voted on himself. He said he was a new commissioner at the time and did not realize anything was wrong.

"This gives Utah County a clean bill of health," said Commissioner Kenneth Pinegar. "We're trying to do the best we can."

War College panel answers questions

By ROY JOHNSON
Universe Staff Writer

National security interests take precedence over human rights in U.S. diplomatic relations, Lt. Col. Paul N. Kane said Monday at BYU, as one of six members of an elite current affairs panel from the U.S. Army War College.

The Army ROTC and ASBYU Academics-sponsored presentation, held in the Pardoe Theater at 1 p.m., began with a brief identification of several current defense issues and then turned into a question and answer period covering topics from a volunteer Army to the U.S. role in a possible China-Taiwan war.

Human rights

Answering a question on human rights, Kane said, "The state department keeps a report card on every nation we have relations with in regards to human rights. We must sometimes sacrifice human rights for national interests."

"The cost of war is much higher than the cost of peace," said Rhodes scholar Lt. Col. Howard D. Graves, speaking of the price of the Israel-Egypt peace settlement.

Laser weapons

In response to other questions from the crowd of more than 300, members of the panel said laser weapons are still in the research stage for both the U.S. and the USSR; the neutron bomb is not a weapon that will ever be used lightly; and the non-active army of 500,000 men short of what it should

Members of the Current Affairs Panel, each of whom holds a master's degree, also visited nine BYU classes and had lunch with the faculty of the Religion Department.

Public relations

The panel is designed for public relations and not for recruiting purposes, said Major Dowling of BYU ROTC. One of the main objectives of the panel is to clear up "misconceptions and even myths" that exist between civilians and the military.

Sixty-five colleges will be visited by the panel this year including the University of Utah today and the University of Colorado on Wednesday.

Lt. Col. Jerry D. Lambo, S. Corps and panel chairman, is a graduate of the U.S. Army War College and now a member of the Department of Command and Management at the college.

'Circle of Gold' letter illegal

The illegality of the Circle of Gold chain letter was reaffirmed by Utah Attorney General Robert Hansen Monday.

The state has received calls from all over the state of Utah on the letter, but the only case pending is against May Blatter in Eighth Circuit Court in Provo, said Assistant Attorney General Ernie Jones.

The fraudulent chain letter isn't as prevalent at BYU now as it has been in the past, according to Detective Leonard Brown of BYU Security.

"There were a lot of cases back in October," he said. "Either we've stopped most of it now or they have gone underground."

"There have been some efforts to revive it, but we have been keeping abreast of them," Jones said.

Hansen said criminal complaints will be filed against participants in the Circle of Gold chain "where appropriate."

"There is a state statute which makes it unlawful to participate in a pyramid scheme," Jones said. "The Circle of Gold is obviously a pyramid scheme. One person contacts two people and then those two contact two more and so on down the chain."

"People are foolish to participate in it as there is a slim chance of ever making any money," he said. The chain has recently showed up in New Mexico, where a man has figured out the chance of anyone ever winning, according to Jones.

"There are 12 people before you, and by the time they get to you there are four to eight thousand people and 25 steps involved. In order for it to work for everyone it would involve a couple of million people — more than there are in the state," he said. "The only ones making money are the people at the top of the list."

The illegal chain letter is a class A misdemeanor, Jones said. The maximum penalty could be a $1000 fine and one year in the county jail.

Foreign LDS assisted understanding talks

By JORGE TEJEDA
Universe Staff Writer

As everyone listened quietly to speakers at the LDS General Conference last weekend, busy people in the Tabernacle on Temple Square made it possible for foreign visitors to hear the messages in their own languages.

A staff of about 60 people translated general conference talks into 18 different languages, said Mrs. Marie H. Gicquel, French coordinator for the LDS Conference.

The translators received six hours of intensive training two months prior to the conference, Mrs. Gicquel said.

Training takes place in the Church Administration Building, where the translators sit in a similar situation to the one they will encounter in the conference. Interpreters hear recordings from the conference and are asked to translate simultaneously to give them exactness, Mrs. Gicquel said.

To train the translators to be accurate, she said, "It is exciting because you prepare yourself to receive great things from the Spirit. The Lord needs to do that for his leadership in his church."

Most of the talks are translated at the conference, said Wolfgang D.

Lebedies, German translator for the conference. "We receive the talks one week before, except President Kimball's, which we received this (Saturday) morning," he said.

Translators are often challenged when speakers change the subjects or add to their talks. "In the Japanese language structure, the verb comes at the end of the sentence," said Kiyoshi Miyakawa, Japanese translator. "Until we listen to the complete sentence we cannot translate it. That makes it too hard as far as simultaneous translation goes."

"The greatest challenge is to cope with the unexpected," Mrs. Gicquel said.

Downstairs in the Tabernacle, two translators share a booth as they do their work. Each translator wears a headphone. Through one side of the headphone, the translator listens to the English version of the talk, and through the other side the interpreter hears himself while translating through the microphone.

Each booth has a TV monitor to observe the speakers in order to see that everything works simultaneously. Only one of the translators translates, Mrs. Gicquel said. The other one is there to make sure there are no problems.

"Most of the translators are natives," Mrs. Gicquel said. "We are trying to train some American returned missionaries for the day when we need people to translate from their language to French, but it is almost impossible to do a very good job when you are not a native because the speech is so fast and you have to translate very fast."

Another challenge is to translate humorous remarks and make the people hearing the translation laugh, said Miss Lynda L. Kinikini, Tongan translator.

Getting the Spirit from the speech is the greatest challenge while translating for the conference, said Carl-Erick Johansson, Swedish translator. "You prepare yourself by knowing the speakers, by knowing their way of speaking and trying to get the same testimony they have," Johansson said.

"If the translator does not have the Spirit and if the translation does not contain the Spirit, he cannot convey the Spirit of the speaker, and that is the most important thing of all."

Provoan pleads 'not guilty' to charge of sexual abuse

By JOHN JESSE
Universe Staff Writer

A Provo man pleaded not guilty in Fourth District Court Monday in Heber to charges of forcible sexual abuse, a third degree felony. Judge David Sam set the trial date for May 3 in Heber's Fourth District Court.

The defendant, David Chipman, 24, was bound over by Eighth District Court after a preliminary hearing March 28 in Heber. Chipman was arrested Feb. 14 by BYU security officers after he allegedly made sexual advances to a BYU under-derover officer.

Harold J. Call, Wasatch County attorney, said the $1,500 bail Chipman presented at the time of his arrest has been continued.

The innocent plea came as a surprise to the prosecution, said BYU Detective Dean Clive

Winn, who is in charge of the BYU Security investigative team which arrested Chipman.

Winn said Chipman had told BYU Security he was going to release his lawyer in court today so that he would be able to participate in plea bargaining. The BYU detective said neither Security nor the Wasatch County attorney solicited the information from Chipman.

"He came in person and we advised him that we could not discuss plea bargaining while he still had an attorney representing him," Winn said. "He indicated he had written a letter to his attorney releasing him, so we were kind of surprised today. But we didn't care one way or another."

Winn cited the fact that only one witness was needed to have Chipman bound over for trial as evidence that the defense has a strong case and is "ready to go forward."

Winn said he did not want to see the charge lessened. "We want Chipman to get the counseling he needs to overcome this problem he has. This has been our position all along — we're not out to send anyone to jail," he said.

The May 3 trial date may cause some problems for the defense, Winn said, because student witnesses will have gone home from school.

"This will put us in a bind, but it is not insurmountable," he said.

Motherhood as career topic of forum address

Sydney S. Reynolds, the 1964 valedictorian of the BYU College of Humanities and Social Sciences, will speak at today's forum assembly on "Wife and Mother: A Valid Career Option for the College Educated Woman."

The public is invited to the 10 a.m. assembly in the Marriott Center. The talk will be broadcast live over KBYU-FM and broadcast over both KBYU-FM and KBYU-TV, Channel 11, Sunday at 9 p.m.

Music for the assembly will be provided by soprano Marilyn Rudolph.

Mrs. Reynolds, wife of Dr. Noel B. Reynolds, BYU associate professor of philosophy, is the mother of nine children and active in community and church affairs.

She will discuss five questions: Should all women be required to take homemaking classes in college? Is full-time motherhood detrimental to the college educated woman who has high ambitions? Are there any career advantages in being a full-time wife and mother? Who comes first in a woman's career decisions? Just what is a man's role in all of this?

Since graduating from BYU with high honors, Mrs. Reynolds has completed course work for a master's degree in history and educational psychology. She earned her B.A. degree in history and political science.

Mrs. Reynolds was recently elected PTA president of the Hillcrest Elementary School in Orem for next year, is voting district chairman for the Republican Party, a member of the Regional Planning Committee for the Governor's Speak Out on Libraries, and a member of the Cordial Club. Art director to speak during lecture series

The executive director of the Utah Arts Council will be on campus today to speak as part of the Executive Lecture Series sponsored by the School of Management.

Mrs. Ruth R. Draper will speak to students and faculty on "Managing the Arts" at 4 p.m. in 184 JKB. "Historically the arts have always been meaningful to the people of Utah, both directly and indirectly," Mrs. Draper said.

"But only recently have we begun to realize that the importance of the arts is not only felt in terms of the 'quality of life' and 'cultural appreciation' we often hear about, but that the arts are an important part of our economy."

Utah Governor Scott M. Matheson has said of the Council, "In spite of its 79 years, the Council is a young progressive and resourceful agency dynamically bringing all the arts to an ever-increasing statewide audience."

Mrs. Draper received her B.A. in English from the University of Utah. She is active in civic organizations, Utah Bar Auxiliary, Women's Legislative Council, and was a past president of the Utah League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Draper has been the director of the Utah Arts Council since 1974.

How much radiation are you absorbing?

How much radiation are you absorbing every day? How much of it could you avoid?

The average American gets about 10 to 120 millirems of natural background radiation a year. This includes radiation from elements in the earth, from outer space and from substances like potassium 40 in the body.

We also are exposed to man-made radiation, most of it in the form of medical and dental X-rays. Television sets emit a tiny amount of radiation, and some smoke detectors contain radioactive materials.

We face a different, but still potentially dangerous, kind of radiation from the sun and from microwaves in ovens.

The risks from everyday, low-level radiation are minimal compared to the threat posed by a nuclear accident. But scientists do not know whether there is any level of radiation, no matter how small, which is absolutely safe.

Here is a look at some radiation sources and ways to minimize risk:

SUN

Radiation from the sun's infrared and ultraviolet rays is absorbed directly in the skin. The Food and Drug Administration says radiation from the sun is the leading cause of skin cancer.

Scientists say 60 percent of the ultraviolet rays striking the earth reach the surface between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. If you must get a tan, try to do so before 10 a.m. or after 2 p.m.

X-RAYS

Experts say 90 percent of the man-made radiation we face comes from diagnostic X-rays. To be safe, the FDA suggests:

—Don't decide on your own to have an X-ray like the ones you get at a mobile unit for detecting tuberculosis. There are safer and more effective tests for the disease, and the mobile units often expose you to more radiation than necessary.

MICROWAVE OVENS

The microwaves in an oven are generated by an electron tube inside the cabinet. They bounce back and forth and are absorbed by the food, causing water molecules in the food to vibrate and produce heat.

The FDA sets a strict limit on the amount of radiation permitted to leak from the oven wall. It also requires ovens to have two interlock systems to prevent them from operating if the door is not securely fastened.

To avoid trouble, do not have the oven rewired so that the interlock system will not operate. If you suspect your oven is leaking, contact your state health department for a possible test. Do not try to test the oven yourself. The FDA says that a number of the devices sold for do-it-yourself tests "are inaccurate and unreliable."

Y tracksters lamed by Ducks

Trouble can come in many different shapes and sizes. For Coach Clarence Robison, trouble came when his BYU track team walked into a nest of Cougar eating Ducks-the University of Oregon variety that is.

"We just ran into trouble," said Robison of Oregon's 118-45 blitz of BYU in Corvallis, Ore., Saturday. "They are a tremendous team, probably the best duel meet team in America."

"It was one of those weekends where you just as soon stayed home," quipped Robison about the Cougar's weekend troubles in the Northwest. "We were a little flat and I don't know why," continued the BYU coach. "In track there isn't any halftime, you can't call time-outs."

"We didn't perform well but we didn't perform that badly," Robison said explaining that his team's efforts when compared to other team's weekend performances would not have stacked up that badly. "Both Washington and Oregon State held meets over the weekend in similar weather conditions — when you compare team scores we would have beaten both of them," Robison said defending his team's performance.

Victories were far and few between Saturday, although Robison cited several performances by his athletes.

Doug Padilla's third place finish in the 5,000-meter run is one of the fastest times run in the nation according to Robison. Padilla's 13.43.5 was far below the NCAA outdoor qualifying mark of 14:05 and was just two-seconds behind Alberto Salazar's event winning clocking of 13:41.5. Padilla also ran a strong race in the 1,500-meters, placing second with a run of 3:46.4.

BYU's victory total for the afternoon was only two. One of those victories came in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, as Rafael Echavarria finished with a time of 52.21. Echavarria was also second in the 100-meter hurdles with a 14.4 time. The remaining BYU win came in the mile-relay as the Cougar team ran a 3:17.7 for the victory.

Robison also praised Larry Lawrence's NCAA qualifying finish in the steeplechase. Lawrence recorded a clocking of 8:51.79 to place second. Tapio Kuusela also earned NCAA qualification, placing second in the hammer toss with a throw of 193.4 feet, easily topping the qualifying mark of 190 feet.

Petersen aces SUSC as Cougars win twice

LISA JOHNSON
Assistant
Sports Editor

Cougar first baseman Ken Clayton gloved a pop-up in the first inning, pitcher Greg Petersen was elated. That play ended the game, and Clayton hit the first BYU homer of the season.

It was the first game of the double-header against Southern Utah State College which ended 6-0 yesterday.

Cougar Coach Gary Pullins said "Greg used the ball to set up the defense for his breaking ball. He played as well as you could ask for."

Petersen himself acknowledged his curve ball was the winning factor. "Usually the fast ball is the curve. I know it was the curve. I know it was the curve. I know it was the curve."

The Cougars could not hit did touch SUSC pitcher Roy Jewkes' fast ball, once pitcher fielder Mark Hildebrand unleashed the first BYU bat in the second inning. Up to that point, the Cougars and T-Birds had exchanged three up, three down innings, but Hildebrand's stick over the left field fence in the fifth inning ended BYU scoring.

The Cougars scored again in the fifth when Marc Thomas, who was running for Hildebrand after he hit a single, and Len Adamiak, who walked on the bases, were advanced by Mark Adamiak's sacrifice drag bunt, then scored home by a Mike double.

Murphy Sua opened the sixth and final inning for Cougar offense with the game's second homer. Clayton and Adamiak singled, Thomas doubled and the Cougars scored twice before the inning, and the game ended.

The guys were just a bit sluggish since we just got off the bus from California at noon yesterday," Pullins said after the game. "But they were executing well despite that."

The Cougars executed well once again in the second half of the double-header, when they beat the T-Birds 10-6. It was during this game that Cougar power hitters cocked their bats and went for three home runs and five doubles.

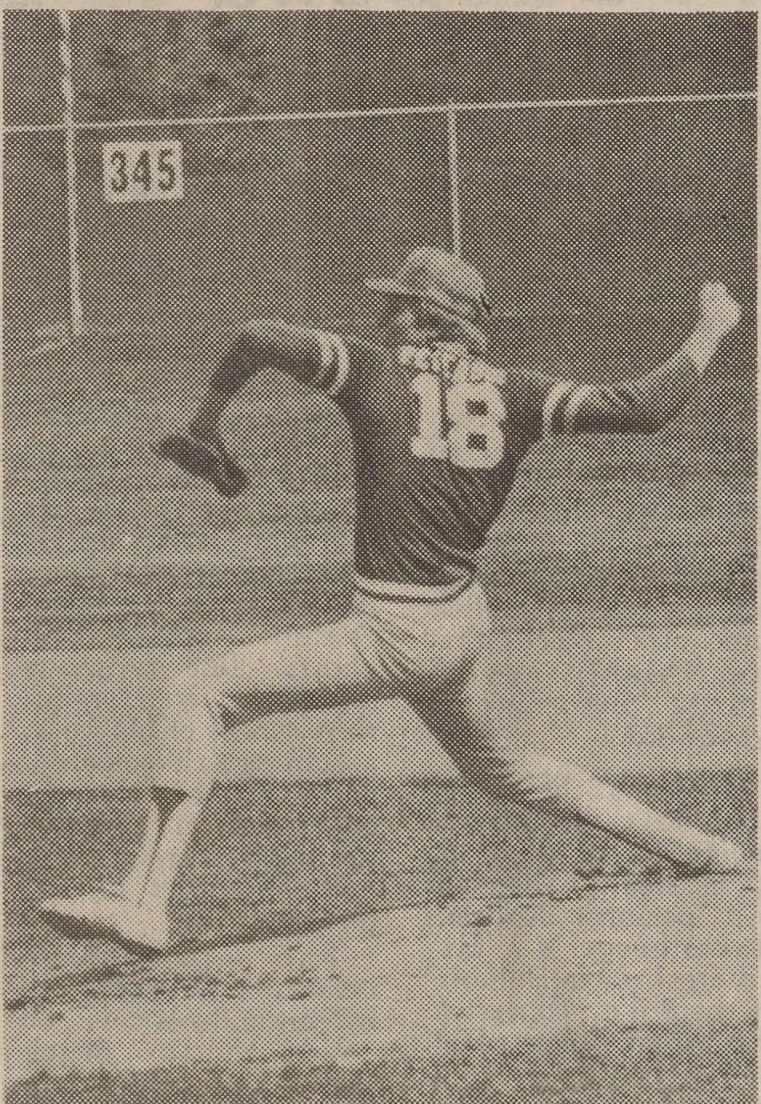

Scot Nebeker threw for the Cougars in the second game, and SUSC bats had considerably better luck against him. The T-Birds got two hits in the second, and in the fourth they hit four and scored the same number before Nebeker was relieved by Tyler Steinbach.

In the meantime, the Cougars had only scored once, but they evened and surpassed the T-Birds when they took their turn at the plate that inning.

In the fourth, Sua and Hildebrand hit their second HRs of the day. The Cougars managed to score five times that inning, giving them an advantage they would add to with one run in the fifth.

The sixth inning saw BYU bats for the last time that day, and they finished the game in style when first baseman Rich Thorn hit a homer and Marc Thomas' speed on the base path proved enough to steal two bases after he got on with a single.

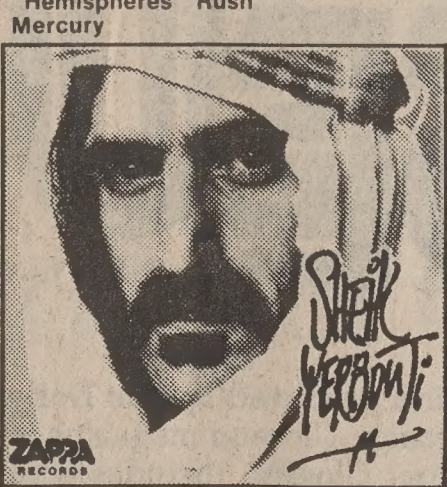

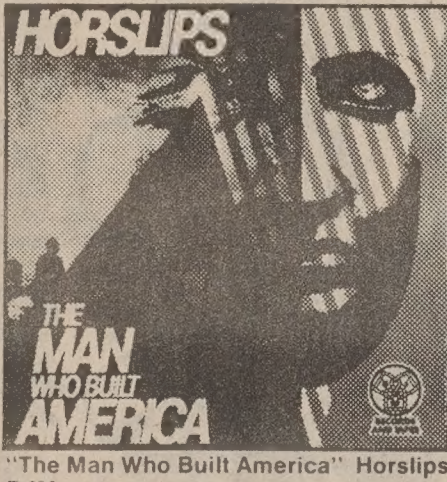

The win gives BYU a 25-14 record, which they hope to improve this weekend when they open WAC play against Utah.

Universe art by Pat Bagley

Film festivals featuring old "family classics" starring Clark Gable, The Marx Brothers, Charlie Chaplin, W. C. Fields and others are currently popular, but their survival in Utah Valley could be endangered by lack of support.

'Family classics' in trouble

By DOUG SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Although the fact may be surprising to the old popcorn-eating movie goer, there are alternatives to the typical Friday night dating situation. Utah Valley is full of innovative and culturally refined entertainment. Unfortunately, because of lack of support, some of those alternatives seem doomed.

"Little theater, coupled with a film festival, is becoming the 'in' thing for actors to do," said Duke Majors of Pleasant Grove, owner of the Alhambra Theater. "...we are trying to bring in names like Don Knotts, Eve Arden and Mickey Rooney. I think that the people of the valley will support us, but we still have some changes to make."

Last year the Villa Theater in Springville, also owned by Majors, presented Robert Peterson in Man of La Mancha. Though it was a good, professional production, Majors said it was not a successful box office draw.

"In fact, we lost money on that production," he added.

Majors said that the most frustrating feeling he has is when he has a good family centered show and "...you want everyone to see it, but no one comes."

There are people in the Valley who demand clean family entertainment, so "...we edit out bad language in our productions for two reasons. First, we don't feel that it is necessary, and second, we want to please our audiences," said Majors. "But those who yell the loudest don't support us. And that is quite frustrating."

Majors, an architectural designer, said he has attempted to do something about providing Utah

Valley with an added cultural and family centered environment.

When Majors moved to Utah and became affiliated with the Utah Opera Assn., the association had no stage to perform on, so Majors bought the Villa Theater. He converted it to do stage productions and for the showing of old-time movies.

"We are trying to create an avenue for the nostalgic movie goer," said Majors. "...because old movies have been growing in acceptance in Utah Valley; the Laurel and Hardy's and Charlie Chaplin's."

He added that he felt that movies made in the '30s and '40s have more art value than do the Hollywood products of today.

With the Villa slowly gaining support, Majors bought the Grove Theater in Pleasant Grove. He remodeled it, restored the original name, the Alhambra, and opened it to the public strictly for old movies. "We can't compete with the major theater chains in the valley so we have attempted to serve the old-movie buffs," said Majors. "But now we have decided to put on live, original productions from the local area."

Majors has leased the Alhambra Theater to Pavillion Productions.

"We plan on pushing family entertainment that teaches a specific theme and gives our audience a message in an entertaining way," said Mike Perry, director of Pavillion Productions.

But the success of the Alhambra depends on the support of the community in box office sales. "If the Utah Valley residents won't support the independent, family operated theaters, we are all in trouble. The big business theater chains will force us all out of business," said Majors.

"P.D.Q. Bach" subject of 'concert'

The BYU music department presents "P.D.Q. Bach in Memoriam" in an April Fool's Concert Friday, April 6.

Beginning at 8 p.m. in the deJong Concert Hall, HFAC, members of the Chamber Orchestra and Chamber Choir and conductors Dr. David Dalton and Dr. Ralph Woodward, respectively, will open the program with the "Fanfare for the Common Cold."

David Zabriskie, BYU undergraduate student who recently was noted as the composer of the oratorio, "Israel," may be putting his reputation on the line as he performs with Karen Kirkham his own "Variations on the Cougareat for Twenty Thumbs."

Following Zabriskie's travesty comes the "Sonata for Viola Four Hands and Harpsichord" by P.D.Q. Bach. This composition, which requires pretentious physical pyrotechnics, will be essayed by music professors Dr. Harold Laycock, Dr. Reid Nibley and Dalton.

Members of the orchestra will join in a performance of one of the P.D.Q. Bach masterpieces, "Schleppet in E flat Major."

The Chamber Choir, in another homage to the last of the great J.S. Bach sons, will render two madrigals: "The Queen to Me a Royal Pain Doth Give" and "My Bonnie Lass She Smelleth."

The Chamber Orchestra, under the direction of Dalton will bring the concert to a halt with professor Peter Schikele's "Unbegun Symphony." Schikele, the confessed discoverer and biographer of P.D.Q. Bach, has written here the answer to the question brought on by Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony."

Dr. David Dalton, left, Dr. Reid Nibley and Dr. Harold Laycock will be performing in the "P.D.Q. Bach, (1807-1742)? In Memoriam" April 6, April Fool's Concert Friday.

A Cappella to perform tonight

BYU's A Cappella Choir will perform a variety of selections ranging from the renaissance period through contemporary times in their annual spring concert Tuesday, April 3.

Gabrieli-Stokowski" will also be performed.

One of the highlights of the evening will be the choir's performance of "Stabat Mater," by Polish composer Krzysztof Penderecki.

"Typically, our concerts follow a sacred theme," said Dr. Ralph Woodward, director of the choir. Selections will include American songs and spirituals, as well as some other pieces that are "highly adventurous," according to Woodward.

Following the theme of "For My Soul Delighteth in the Song of the Heart," the choir will perform Andreas Hakenberger's "Exsultate Justi in Domini" at the 8 p.m. concert in the deJong Concert Hall of the HFAC.

"My God, My God, Look Upon Me," by John Blow and "In Ecclesiis" by Giovanni

Penderecki was born in Debica, near Krakow, Poland, of a devoutly religious family. He has won many prizes for his strikingly original compositions for orchestra, chamber groups and choirs. The religious orientation is a prominent aspect of his work, according to Woodward, and "Stabat Mater," composed in 1962, is probably Penderecki's most famous choral piece.

The American favorite, "Shenandoah" by Marie Pooler, will be conducted by Mack Wilberg, featuring Susan Parry, Tony Pinedo, and Mark Sheldon as soloists.

Robert Shaw's

spiritual, "If I got My Ticket, Can I Ride?" will be performed by the choir and soloist Dan Perkins as the final number.

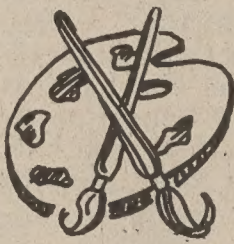

Woodward, a faculty member at the BYU for the past 24 years, has led the choir to foreign lands and throughout the United States in regular concert tours. Woodward, himself, was on leave last semester in Vienna where he conducted a chamber choir at the International Music Center.

Tickets for Tuesday's concert, sponsored by the Department of Music, are available at the music ticket office, HFAC.

Green Beret team trains Y cadets

By ROY JOHNSON
Universe Staff Writer

BYU Army ROTC cadets have been from a grueling three days of training camp.

Training camp is "the major event of the year," said Battalion Commander David Morehouse, who attended the camp with 150 BYU cadets. "It's like being in the army for once instead of just being a cadet."

The annual camp, initiated with a speech on freedom by Dean of Student Life J. Elliot Cameron, was held at Camp Williams, a Utah National Guard Camp.

Green Beret special forces instructors from the Utah National Guard taught the cadets special skills such as the use of light anti-tank weapons, how to deal with a certain type of mine and radio field communications procedures.

A self-propelled howitzer and a towed artillery piece, used in demonstrations and training, gave cadets the opportunity to learn small-scale what they will have to do when they work with artillery, said Morehouse.

The cadets had field experience with automatic weapons and machine-guns using tracer ammunition and in helicopter assaults and night maneuvers.

Helicopters provided by the Medi-Vac Unit in Salt Lake City transported cadets in simulated maneuvers involving light infantry tactics. In the night action, the cadets stayed out until 11 p.m., rising at 4:30 the next morning.

Physical tests formed another important part of the camp. Cadets were scored in three categories: the maximum 100 points per category were received by those who did 56 push-ups a minute, 54 sit-ups a minute and ran two miles in under 14 minutes and seven seconds.

These scores, combined with others earned in military skills, will be used to choose the best basic and advanced cadets and the best company. The winners will be announced this month, Morehouse said.

BYU was the number one school and had the number two cadet in competition last year among the 13,000 at the camp.

BYU Army ROTC cadets receive special training in the use of artillery during their recent spring camp, the "major event of the year" according to Battalion Commander David Morehouse.

Up With People concert today

People, not nations or ideology, are what matter. That's an idea that is worth celebrating, and Up With People does it with charm, love and uncomplicated joy.

THE NEW YORK TIMES

One of five international Up With People casts will perform a concert today at noon in the ELWC ballroom. The concert is sponsored by the BYU Culture Office, and is free to students and the public.

Promotion Director Mark Kinney says the group displays a prevailing attitude of "positivism," and offers the message that there is a lot of good still left in the world.

After Tuesday's concert, members of the group will tour the BYU campus and Osmond Studios, and will stay overnight at the homes of students and families who have offered to accommodate them. Wherever they go, this is the way they arrange for housing.

"This is a unique situation at BYU," said Kinney. "We didn't make a formal housing plea, but we've found places for everyone to stay." He continued, "It seems like the students here are the kind of people that will gladly do that kind of thing."

On Wednesday the group will visit the Temple Square in Salt Lake City before leaving for their next performance in Ely, Nevada, Kinney said.

Members of the Up With People cast sing with the performing group for one year, including a five week training session and the remaining months on the road.

"We hold interviews at the end of each show," said Kinney, "and performers for the next year are chosen, on the basis of personality rather than talent."

Kinney, who performed with the group last year,

One of five international Up With People casts will give a free performance today at noon in the ELWC ballroom. Promotion Director Mark Kinney says the group aims at helping young people discover their potential.

said the experience introduced him to "so many more things there are to do in the world." His own interest in restaurant management was sparked when he had to prepare several meals for groups of 100 and more.

Up With People, according to Kinney, aims at helping young people discover their own potential and develop leadership skills.

Kinney, after spending five days on the BYU campus, says he is considering the possibility of coming here for his last year of school when his second year with Up With People is over.

Rare grass fossils identified at Y

By DAVID WEBB
Universe Staff Writer

A team of BYU scientists has identified several samples of fossilized grass which they say prove some complex plants developed millions of years earlier than scientists previously thought.

Dr. Bruce Smith, chairman of BYU's Botany and Range Science Department, said the BYU samples are "the best grass fossils ever described." He said the oldest previously known fossil of this type of plant dates back about 10,000 years.

Smith said the fossils they are working with are undoubtedly 15 million years old.

The fossils were first identified by Dr. William D. Tidwell, a BYU botany and range science professor specializing in plant fossils. Tidwell said he discovered the rocks while visiting a friend in southern California. Tidwell's friend had picked up the fossils out in the California desert, and was ready to throw them away when Tidwell recognized them as valuable samples of petrified grass.

The man gave the rocks to Tidwell who brought them back to BYU for extensive study.

Upon examining the rocks closely, Tidwell was surprised to find the grass had a physical structure characteristic of C-4 plants — relatively modern plants using a particularly efficient chemical process in their photosynthesis. Shaving a thin section off the rock, Tidwell examined it under a microscope and found its structure was very similar to modern grasses.

'Fun Run' Saturday

By JOSEPH WALKER
Universe Staff Writer

Elder Marion D. Hanks of the LDS First Quorum of the Seventy will fire the starting gun for the First Annual BYU 14-Stake "Fun Run" Saturday, according to President Rex E. Lee of the BYU 7th Stake.

"Brother Hanks has another appointment in Salt Lake City on Saturday," Lee said, "but he is such a strong supporter of this activity he is going to make time to be here."

The 4.5 mile run will begin in the northeast parking lot of the Marriott Center at 9 a.m., although Lee indicated participants should plan on being there about an hour early to register.

Lee said students will want to participate in the "Fun Run" because "it will be a fun activity, a good social occasion shared with anywhere from 4,000 to 14,000 of their brothers and sisters."

"It can also be the beginning or a continuation of an individual's personal fitness program," Lee added. "Whether you run or walk the whole way, it will be a good time for all, and a good time to reap both the physical and spiritual benefits of physical fitness."

It's easy to see the physical benefits of a fitness program, but Lee said the spiritual benefits, although not quite so obvious, are equally important.

"As believers in the miracle of the restoration, we have an increased understanding of the importance of the physical body," the law school dean said. "We understand that the Word of Wisdom is not only temporal, but has spiritual roots."

Lee referred to the writings of the Apostle Paul, who called our bodies the "temple of God," and the "tabernacle of our spirits."

"The Brethren feel strongly enough about this that they challenged local church leaders to set as one of their goals for the 1978-79 year the development of a physical fitness program by the members of the church," Lee said.

Aside from the challenges of church leaders and the scriptures, Lee said he had personal reasons for encouraging the physical fitness of the members of his stake.

"I can't explain why, but after a period of time on a fitness program for six or seven months, they develop a certain peace within themselves," he said. "A person feels he can deal with and solve life's problems, he is more confident of himself, and more satisfied with his life and his personal development."

"Fitness strips away layers of discouragement," he added.

The "Fun Run" would be an ideal time for students who have not yet begun a personal fitness program to begin, Lee said. "No one should feel embarrassed about walking. Most people will be walking at least part of the way. The important thing is just that you come out and participate, and begin your own personal fitness program."
